Georgetown's coaches are worrying whether or not Andy Dempaey, the crack kicking fullback, will be in shape to oppose the strong North Carolina eleven Saturday. The atar putter and dropkicker will probably be iested as much as possible this week in order to be ready for the Tar Heels at the Hillicp Saturday, but there is no certainly that he will be able to start the game against Logan Cunningham's treat.

Georgetown is banking heavily on its showing against North Carolina Saturday for its rating among the South Atlantic elevens. Virginia, Washington and Lee, North Carolina Aggies, and North Carolina are the big teams, with Georgetown, of the South Atlantic section. The Hilltoppers do not play either Virginia or Washington and Lee, but they do meet both the Aggies and North Carolina. Therefore, they will do their best to run up a big score on the Tar Heels at the Hilltop Saturday. Washington and Lee has not startled the world this season thus far. Virginia has a victory over Yale, but next Saturday runs up against Harvard. Virginia's biggest local section game is with North Carolina at Richmond on turkey day. The Aggies were tied, 0 to 0, last week by Roanoke, but are expected to do better from now on. Catholic University expects a stiff battle at Buckhannon, W. Va. Saturday, where the strong West Virginia Weslevan eleven is to be played. The Brooklanders played a hard game against the Maryland Aggies last week, but will have to show more stuff towin from Wesleyan. C. U. has a number of good players in its line-up and should finish a much more successful senson than in 1914.

Wayne Hart hopes to put a team on the field Saturday that will not fumble in the pinches. The workent against W. M. I. last Saturday should do the Kendsil Green eleven lots of good, and Coach Hart thinks his lads will hold their own against the Aggies.

One of the all-important games of the South Atlantic section will be played at Georgetown Saturday when North Carolina, coached in the latest Princeton methods, comes to test Al Exendine's Blue and Gray varsity eleven. This is the first time in several years that these two teams have met on the gridiron and the Tar Heels hope to make it emorable by winning from the team that conquered the Army and held Princeton to two touchdowns, both scored against the second string players of Georgetown. If North Carolina does win Saturday, it will face the remainder of its campaign with head up and will tackle Virginia at Richmond Thanksgiving hopeful of victory.

The more one considers conditions in the South Atlantic section, the more one must grieve that Washington and Lee, Virginia, and Georgetown do not meet yearly on the gridiron. With North Carolina and N. C. A. and M., these teams make up the elite of this section in football. As it happens, Georgetown and Virginia are considerably stronger than they have been in years and a contest between them would come close to deciding the title in this section of the country. However, owing to quarrels among these five teams, the football writera will have to compare teams by the contests they have played against other elevens. If Georgetown and Virginia were to hook up this season at the Hilltop, they would easily attract 20,000 spectators and partisan feeling would run high. Furthermore, they would just about determine the champion, each seeming to have something on the other three. The alumni of both Virginia and Georgetown are believed to be working for a resumption of athletic relations between the two universities, and the sooner it comes the better for both of them. Virginia may pride herself on her early games with Yale and Harvard. A victory over Yale is not to be orned by any second-class eleven. But the fact remains that a win for Virginia over Georgetown would be much sweeter to the Charlottesville hosts. Georgetown may crow loudly over a defeat of the Navy, but if the Blue and Gray could trample on the clan of Virginia, the cheering would not die down in a week. Virginia and Georgetown are logical opponents in the South Atlantic section. They should get together somehow and as soon as possible. Until they do the championship of the section will always be a matter of guesswork.

How long must Charlie White go before he obtains a twenty-round bout with Freddie Welsh, world's lightweight chainpion? Since March 17, 1915, Charlie White has dropped eight lightweight challengers. On St. Patrick's Day he knocked out Sammy Robideau in one round. On March 4 Eddie Murphy succumbed in eleven rounds. Hal Stewart fell before him on May 12 at Fort Wayne in six sessions, while on May 25 he took only three rounds to dispose of Freddy Yelle at Boston. Charlie Thomas went down in seven rounds at Roston on June 8. A week later Young Brown lasted less than one round in New York. Gilbert Gallant, touted by many as the coming champion, went to sleep in the fifth round at Boston on September 21.

On October 5 Matty Baldwin, one of the veterans of the squared circle, had the sponge tossed up in the first round of his bout with White at Boston. Welsh has boxed White twice. In his first match White was out of condition, and, though no decision was given, the little Englishman was much superior. The next time Welsh outboxed the Chicago lad. He can do that with most opponents in ten rounds. But now the demand is that Welsh give White a twenty-round bout. The Chicagoan has disposed of every real contender he has met. generally by the knockout route. He is entitled to a chance for the lightweight crown. I saw him put Eddle Murphy away in Boston last May and never have I seen a better left hand. It comes up with terrific force and on at least two occasions it lifted the South Boston veteran lightweight from his feet. White is no dandy boxer, but he can hit. In ten rounds Welsh can stay sway from him, picking and pecking like a sparrow, pilling up points, but never injuring his opponent If he is a real champion, he should be willing to defend his title and the only way he can do it is to hook up with a real fighter over at least twenty rounds. Charlie White has the best claim to the first bout with Welsh at this distance and when they meet, if they ever do, put your money on White.

Roughness in football always has its evil effect. Lehigh is charged with rough work in the game at New Haven last Saturday and C. U. and Maryland Aggies developed some rough stuff which is bound to have a bad effect. Football is no game for weaklings, 'its true, but it is not a game that gentleman cannot play. A Georgetown player was pulled out of the line-up last Saturday at the Hilltop nerely because he used rough language. No football player is worth his salt, if ne cannot hold his head. The greatest players are the cleanest. You cannot pick out a star of the gridinon who is not at conce of a mouthed and clean-actioned. Usually the other kind never gets into a varsity line-up. A coach can do more good to his team by immediately pulling out a rough player than he can by waiting for some official to penalize the team. Football is a hard game. It calls for superior strength, both of body and of mind, but it does not demand that players shall cinulate longshoremen nor heroes of the ring.

ington, but I thought if this game could be arranged it would be a big thing for both cities." Donnelly is well remembered for his work here at Georgetown. His brother, was at one time coach of the Eastern High School team here, and "Tad" has a been recently appointed at Worcester. The younger Donnelly believes it possible to stage a big game between the phigh school champions, and the matter will probably be taken up with the advisers here. A big game at the end of the sea-A big game at the end of the sea-son here would probably be a good thing financially, and would also give the Washington schools a chance to see how they compared with the Northern football teams.

Middendorf Twins Quit Football to Join Crew

CAMERIDGE, Mass., Oct. 12.—Johnny and Harry Middendorf, twin members of the Harvard crew which won the English Henley in 1914, today deserted the gridient for fall rowins. Both boys were candidates for the line, but had a hard fight ahead to make first string positions.

A short scrimtable vesterilar between the varsity and substitutes resulted in two scores by the regulars. Captain Mahan drop-kielted a goal from the 30-yard line, and on gandher play Scriey recovered a blocked must and ran lifty yards for a touchdown.

to the custom, chalk talk was dropped, and the coaches, realizing the importance of next Saturday's contest with Colgate, began active preparations for that game.

Some new plays that will be used by the Army next Saturday were tried out in the signal drill which wound up the day's work-out. Neyland's condition is so much improved that he will be in the line-up this week. Murrill, the new man, has been a valuable understudy for Neyland, and the Coaches have made the most of the opportunity to use him during Neyland's indisposition. He worked in the signal drill and got away some pretty passes in the Army's air-line practice. O'fiare and Jones, who are fighting it out for a guard position, siternated in today's practice.

Yesterday's work-out featured a long unting duel participated in by Mitchell, Ford, and Coffin. The team came out of the Gettysburg contest in good condition, and except for a few minor bruises the men are all sound and ready for the strenuous drills planned for this week.

Yale's Head Coach Invites Jim Rogers to Assist Him in His Dilemma.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 12-rank Hinkey, head football coach at yale, threw overboard some of his old ideas about coaching a football team and issued a hurry-up call to former Yale football players to come back and help coach the varsity eleven. It is the first time that such an invitation has been sent out since Hinkey came to Yale as head coach. Jim Rogers, captain of the Yale team of 73, and veteran tackle, will be the first to reach the scene of trouble. Others will follow soon, it was stated today by the coaches.

Another radical step taken was the transfer of Capt. Aleck Wilson from right halfback, where he has been playing all season, to quarterback, the post he held last year and on his freshman and school teams. Harry Legore, whose dash and passing ability was one of Yale's biggest assets last season, but who has been playing on the scrub eleven this year until Saturday, was given a regular place at fullback on the varsity.
